

PARTNERSHIP FOR HEALTH DEVELOPMENT

The multi-sectoral dimension is inherent in practically every health intervention and health can no longer be understood as a technical issue. Economics, political science, human development and even issues of global and national security now require us to consider health in a broader context. Health is an important sector of most economics and a core area of social policy. The health status of individuals and population is a significant barometer of social progress broadly affecting the sustainability of our efforts in shaping our lives in both local and global context.

The Ministry of Health has closely cooperated with several organizations within the UN system, particularly those organizations playing an important role in public health.
